HERDSMANSHIP AWARD

GENERAL QUALIFICATIONS:

- All goat care must be by exhibitor and all decorations put up by exhibitor.
- Goats are safe and well cared for. Stall is generally clean and dry and free of excessive or soft/messy droppings. Goats have fresh, clean hay and water at all times.

- Stall is safe at all times, free of debris that the goats can eat or get injured on. Gates should be closed securely and modifications made when necessary to ensure containment of smaller goats. (For example, if you add a piece of chicken wire to the bars, it must be secured in a safe and appropriate way that will not leave sharp edges or long pieces if twine hanging.)
- Goats are transferred to and from the show ring safely with secure collars, are not dragged, are not on long leashes which can be unsafe in crowds. Also, goats should not be brought out of the stall unless they are in a class or about to be. Bringing goats out of the stall to interact with the public is not allowed this year. Goats should not taken out unless in a class or for an approved activity.

ADDITIONAL CRITERIA:

- Decorations, including name plates and farm information, give the stall a welcoming appearance. Any decorations must be safely secured and out of reach of goats. All set-up must be done by exhibitor.
- Appearance and cleanliness of the tack stall: Equipment in tack stall should be clean and well organized. (For example, if you have clippers, they should not have wires hanging across the stall, all hair should be swept up, and cups for cleaning hooves should be gathered up and put out of sight. If you are milking, buckets should be rinsed out and stand wiped down, any grain or treats swept up.)
- Interaction with the public: People will want to pet your goats and ask questions. It is important to engage with the public and answer their questions. (This year will be different because animals will not be allowed to come out of stalls for petting, holding, or pictures.)
